SILVER EYE.

This valuable stallion will make the season at the BANGOR HOUSE STABLES.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

He is a jet black color, eight years old, stands 15½ hands high, weighs 1000 lbs., has a perfect trotting action, and trotted as a four year old within 2.45, having been handled but very little for speed.

SILVER EYE

Was sired by Gilbreth Knox; he by Gen. Knox. His dam was by old Eaton, he by the Avery Horse, he by Bonaparte, he by Messenger descent. Dam of Eaton Horse, Pelton Mare, sired by Winthrop Messenger, he by imported Messenger.

It will be seen by the pedigree of old Eaton, that the blood runs very direct and close back to imported Messenger.

The father of Silver Eye was sold four years ago for $15,000.

TERMS.—For peculiar reasons the price will be $15 (reduced from $50) for the season, to be paid first time of service.

This a rare opportunity for those who desire to raise first class trotting stock.

IMPORTANT to the PUBLIC.

THIS DAY

R. P. STONE

HAS "MARKED DOWN" every article in his entire stock. To such low prices have they come, that customers cannot believe their eyes when reading the "figures" these prices seem so fabulous to the reader that never advertised before. "SEEING IS BELIEVING" would almost seem a question. And "Marking Down" has grown so familiar to our readers and others, that it is sometimes difficult to draw. But truth is stronger than fiction. Come one of the "lucky" ones. Be sure you come and see for your selves, for now, instead of hearing, "and wonderful are thy works," you will exclaim, "Behold, and see as you shall see."

Exceptionally in this kind of business, I do not advertise goods not on hand, but will say that I have a few of those Ladies' Sacques left, which I shall sell at the same low figures as the goods advertised.

N. W. Farwell, esq., was thrown from his carriage and badly his horse thrown, at the blind crossing of the M. C. Railroad, near Crowley's on Thursday.

Ground was broken Saturday morning for the foundation of Odd Fellows' Block in Lewiston.

Aroostook.

The Sunrise says Samuel McLaughlin was brought to Sherman from Sandy Stream, last week, sick with typhoid pneumonia. The first eighteen miles of the route lay through an unbroken wilderness. Four men took him upon a sled that distance by hand. When they reached the Wassataquoik, they built him a raft to take him across. The trip occupied two days, and they were obliged to camp in the woods. Arriving at the East Branch place, Mr. Hersey took the sick man upon a sled and brought him to Mt. Hayling-cow's, where he remained in a very critical situation.

The Sunrise says that on Sunday last at Wade Plantation, a young man and two young girls attempted to cross the Aroostook river in a log canoe, which overset and threw all three into the water. One of the girls caught the bow of the canoe and saved herself from sinking. The other girl sank to the bottom twice, but was finally caught by the arm by the young man, and together they got hold of the boat, which was bottom up. They floated down the river two miles when they were rescued by a man, who with another boat, went to their assistance.

According to a former decision of the regatta committee, the semi-annual regatta of the Bowdoin Navy was to occur on Wednesday, June 7th, but in accordance with the expressed wish of many of those interested, this decision has been changed and the regatta will take place on Friday, June 30, at 10 o'clock a. m. This is the day which the junior class selected for the painting of their ivy. Saturday, the athletic association held their semi-annual field day on the Topsham fair grounds. Efforts are being made to secure a base ball game in the afternoon, but it is quite doubtful about completing them.

Mark Mann of Bridgton had his hip severely hurt by being run over by a wagon heavily laden with shingles, from which he had been thrown by his frightened horse.

The News says that large rents are in active demand in Bridgton. An unusual amount of house building is going on the present season.

The News says the steamer Sebago commenced her regular trips over the Sebago Lake route last Monday. The traveling public hail with pleasure the opening of steam navigation over this charming and popular route.

WHIG AND COURIER.

CAMPAIGN EDITION

For 1876.

To be issued Three Months, beginning June 23d, and closing September 15th.

A NEWSPAPER FURNISHED AT LESS THAN COST.

In compliance with requests by many leading Republicans and with a desire to promote the dissemination of Republican principles and to aid in assuring the most emphatic Republican triumph in the approaching Presidential election, the Proprietors have decided to furnish the WEEKLY edition of the WHIG AND COURIER for the three months during the Campaign at a price hardly covering the cost of the white paper. The first number of the Campaign WEEKLY COURIER, which is made up with the latest telegraphic and other news from our Daily, will be issued June 23d, immediately after the opening of the Centennial canvass by the National Convention at Cincinnati, June 14, and the Republican State Convention in Bangor, June 22, and the last number will be issued September 15th with a report of our State election.

The edition will comprise thirteen weekly numbers of the largest paper published in the State, each number accompanied by a Two-page Supplement, and will be furnished to new subscribers only at the following low rates.

One Copy, sent Postage paid, 35cts.

EXTRA INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.

Three Copies to one address,	$1.00
Ten Copies to one address,	3.20
Twenty Copies to one address,	6.00
Fifty Copies to one address,	14.00
One Hundred Copies to one address,	25.00

We have determined to offer the Campaign Courier at this low price solely with the object at bringing to the attention of those who do not now take any Republican paper, the current information upon which a sound political judgment should be based, and the merits and claims of the doctrines and principles which we advocate.

The coming Campaign will be one of the most important in our National history, and promises to exceed any previous contest in interest and excitement. It already manifest that mere presentation, rattling and sensational reports will be freely employed to deceive the public, and it is important that reliable and trustworthy information should be most widely circulated to counteract such misleading influences. Every citizen should keep fully posted concerning public affairs during the progress of the Campaign, and the WEEKLY COURIER, with its forty-eight columns yearly devoted to current news, will prove a most desirable compendium of information to be put at the hands of every voter.

Send In Subscriptions at once.

The Republican Town Committees and all other citizens who are interested in the success of the Republican cause are invited to render practical and valuable aid by taking prompt measures for placing the Campaign edition of the WHIG AND COURIER in the hands of every voter who is not now a subscriber. The prices are merely nominal, and the efforts of two or three earnest Republicans in each town can readily insure a general circulation of the paper among the voting population.

Regulate the Bodily Functions.

This advice should be especially heeded by those who suffer from an irregular or inactive body or from disorders of the liver or kidneys. Experience proves that the use of the celebrated vegetable diuretic, or of the tonic and regulating properties of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and, as all authorities of the organs of digestion have a strong tendency to lessen disease, and that every day's use of the Bitters shows that it can be delayed a moment longer than is necessary. The action of this medicine is corrective upon the bowels, diffusing mildly yet a thorough purgative, since it is never violent or abrupt, but acts in gentle and natural, and its effects from the first dose and ever after, they are strengthening as well as mildly stimulative. The health of impaired vigor which it gives to digestion also renders it a most effective general tonic. d&w

"ANYTHING-TO-BEAT-BLAINE!"

The immense lead which Mr. Blaine has taken in the Presidential canvass, and the almost certainty of his nomination on the first ballot unless he can be overwhelmed with slander before the 14th of June, have driven his assailants to a desperate crusade of scandal unparalleled in our politics. From now till the day of the Convention calumny will be piled on fabrication by the unscrupulous gang who have undertaken to "kill off Blaine," private correspondence will be ransacked; the obligations of honor outraged, the most ordinary business transactions sensationally distorted, and nothing left undone that Bohemian scoundrelism and political malice can suggest. Already the scandal-mongers are relishing the Associated Press hand of their disgraceful work, a despatch having been sent from Boston Monday night stating that the Herald would publish next morning "an interview with a prominent Lawyer" of Boston, making insinuations against Mr Blaine, while that paper contains only alleged gossip by anonymous parties, which was not apprehended in any way to warrant its being sent over the wires. The determination of these vermin to defeat Mr. Blaine by slander has been plainly shown. It is understood by the people, and will result, in the future, as it has hitherto, in strengthening the support of the candidate thus atrociously assailed.

A PAPER THAT MAINE SHOULD REPUDIATE.

We have always been pleased to speak favorably of the New York Times, and when the Tribune deserted the Republican party in 1872, we used that influence we had in transferring Republican patronage in this State from the former to the latter. To what extent this transfer proceeded was shown by our publication of correspondence from all quarters announcing the wholesale stoppage of Tribune's and the organizing of clubs for the Times. A similar movement prevailed to a large degree in all parts of the country, and it was thought that the paper thus favored because of its adherence to Republicanism, would make good use of its opportunity and prove equal to the position of the leading Republican journal of the country. That it failed to do so became painfully obvious to those who had been its most ardent friends, before the close of the Presidential campaign, and during the past few years its vacillating course upon important public issues, the loading of its correspondents to the rebellious elements of the South, its readiness to simulate independence by unwarranted aspersion of the President and leading Republicans; and permeating all the constant and nauseating parade of its childish and consuming jealousy of the Tribune, has impaired the confidence of the best class of its supporters.

When the Tilton scandal against Henry Ward Beecher was first agitated, the Times was warm and earnest in its defence of the great preacher, and full of contempt for Tilton, Moulton and the rest of the rowdy gang of his traducers. When the case came to trial the Tribune by superior enterprise obtained the publication of the official report, thereby securing the services of the Court stenographers, and the Times, which was compelled to print an expensive report of the trial, without achieving the prestige obtained by the Tribune's verbatim report, and without the assistance which the latter enjoyed, became exasperated beyond measure. Its wrath was vented upon the hated rival and upon everything that the rival favored. "Love me, love my dog," became paraphrased with the Times into "Hate the Tribune; abuse whoever the Tribune may favorably mention." The latter paper becoming an earnest advocate of fair play for Mr. Beecher the Times immediately began flinging out against him and his lawyers, and the numerous protests of its readers so inflamed its anger, that it finally became one of the most bitter and vicious assailants of Plymouth Church and its Pastor. All readers of the Times are aware of this change of its course, and that its treatment of the great clergyman while his trial was progressing, became positively infamous toward the last. A constant perusal of its columns and our strictest inquiries as to the cause of this strange vindictiveness, brought out the one fact that it was another case of one who could be satisfied with nothing while Mordecai was sitting at the King's gate.

The creation of the new Tribune Building in the immediate vicinity only aggravated the mania of jealousy which had taken complete possession of the owner of the Times, and with a splendid establishment of his own, an extensive and profitable business, and immense advantages if he would only avail of them, the paper has been almost literally governed by the Tribune under a rule of contrariety.

Prior to the opening of the present campaign and while Mr. Blaine was a prominent prospective candidate, the conductors of the Times entertained the highest respect for him and he was always handsomely treated in its columns. When the canvass opened it was still friendly disposed until the Tribune chanced to speak kindly of the ex-Speaker, when the Times at once coddled toward him, and with every additional favorable word in the former, the latter became more openly hostile, until it has recently been absolutely disgusting in its spiteful injustice toward him. Having no candidate of its own it has drifted partially into line with the other mud-machine journals, and is giving Bristow the questionable support of circulating and encouraging every slander against Mr. Blaine. Its comments have been so brutally unjust as to call out protests of the most earnest character, and we are forced to regard its recent exhibitions of malevolence toward our most distinguished representative as nothing less than a gross outrage upon the Republicans of Maine who have supported the paper. Our people care nothing about the quarrels of two New York newspapers, but when one of them permits its blind hatred of a rival to find vent in unprovoked and unjustifiable abuse of the honored and trusted Republican leader of Maine, it is time to administer a rebuke, and we believe that our people will do so in the prompt and most effectual way.

We are very much obliged to some one who has induced the Commercial to call our attention to an error which we are very glad to correct. Unlike the editor of that paper we do not seek to make a scape-goat of any subordinate, but assuming full responsibility, always feel pleased to rectify any error that finds its way into our columns. We have had a copy of Mr. Bristow's Memorial Address lying on our desk for one or two weeks, and have read the principal portion of its text. A note to the Editor at the head of the sheet requesting "that it be published in your paper which gives the account of this year's Decoration Day," gave us the impression that it was to be delivered this year, and although we glanced at the other note and observed that Louisville was the place of deliverance, our attention was not attracted by the date of the year, 1875, and we commented under our original impression. That our mistake was inadvertent is obvious, as we were aware that numerous copies had been received in this city, and while we regret falling into any, even the slightest error, the point which we made was not materially affected thereby. The Boston Globe, asserting that copies of Senator Morton's Memorial Address at Wilmington were to be sent all over the South by the agents of his Presidential Campaign Bureau," remarked that it is "rather rough to work for political capital over the graves of fallen heroes." While we were wrong in stating that Mr Bristow's address had been furnished in advance, he is undoubtedly quite as responsible as Senator Morton for the agent of his Campaign Bureau," and the Bristow Club of Boston in doing precisely what the Globe condemns, are amenable to the same strictures on "working for political capital over the graves of fallen heroes."

We can afford to smile at the glee with which our contemporary pounces upon the unusual discovery of an error in our statements, and no more emphatic attestation of the general correctness of our columns could be given, than the way in which our remarkably vexatious neighbor heralds the discovery of a palpable inadvertence with the exclamation, "Lo! how the mighty has fallen." The zeal of our contemporary has saved us the annoyance of being charged with error by some paper more respectable than itself.

THE MUD SLINGERS DESPERATE.

[Correspondence N. Y. Tribune.]

As Mr. Blaine's lead at Cincinnati is more clearly seen, the efforts of his rivals to set afloat damaging stories against him grow more desperate. The last is the weakest. A private letter in which—believing, as a good many thousand of others did and when they bought, that the Northern Pacific was going to be more profitable to the original constructors than the Union Pacific was—Mr. Blaine advised a personal friend to go in "on the ground floor," and told him of a chance to do it, is paraded as proof of a corrupt connection with the road. So far as it proves anything, it does, in fact, prove the exact opposite. It says "I cannot touch it." This was not written for the public eye, in the light of Credit Mobilier and subsequent experiences, but in strict privacy, in a straightforward business letter to a friend, as far back as 1870. And, as if to make the whole thing absurd, the authors of the scandal go on to show that the friend did raise the money, and that after all Mr. Blaine failed to get him the chance to invest it.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Twelve States have elected delegates to the St Louis Convention, and the most authentic slate is Governor Hendricks 121, Samuel J. Tilden 58, William Allen 42, Joel Parker 18, General Hancock 15, Senator Thurman 15, T. A. Bayard, 6; total 316.

The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle has this assertion: "With a single exception every State which has instructed its delegates to vote for Tilden is conceded to the Radicals. The exception is New York, and New York will go Radical if Tilden is nominated."

Congressman Neal (Democrat) of Ohio says: "Tilden will not come within 75,000 votes of carrying Ohio."

Some of the independent newspapers say they are not satisfied with the explanation of Tom Scott. That was not expected; if he had blackened Blaine, they would have been delighted.—New Hampshire Sentinel.

The Nashua Telegraph's "Three Spectators," who went to Washington rather predisposed toward Bristow, brought back the following estimate of the first ballot at Cincinnati as the result of all they could learn:

"Blaine, 284; Bristow, 107; Morton, 127; Conkling, 55; Hayes, 44; Hartranft, 56; scattering, 21. With such a lead, Mr. Blaine seems reasonably sure of the nomination. Should his opponents combine, however, on Bristow, Hayes, or the Great Unknown, he will certainly fail. Is such a combination probable? That will depend on the situation when the decisive hour arrives. At the present outlook Blaine and Hayes, possibly Blaine and Bristow, promises to be the winning ticket both in June and November.

A SWIFT WITNESS.

A well-known Democrat of Massachusetts Mr. W. C. N. Swift, who monopolizes the live oak growth of Florida, and furnishes it to the United States Government at a round profit. "Live Oak" Swift had been put on the stand by Whitthorne's Naval Committee. He was asked whether he paid any money for political purposes. He begged the Committee not to press him to answer. Swift said that he had been a Democrat all his life and his father before him and always expected to be. He begged that the question be not pressed.

The Democrats, eager to catch the Navy Department and thinking that they were already counting the money which had been contributed to Robeson's Senatorial campaign, insisted upon an answer. Swift reluctantly began. He paid $10,000 for the election of James Buchanan. The committee was a little surprised, but pressed him for further answers. He paid $1,000 for the campaign of Governor Marcy in New Hampshire, $500 for the election of Governor Gaston, $500 to Governor Tilden's campaign expenses, and $500 to Governor English's campaign. Here the committee suffered the witness to stop short.

THE STEPHENS CASE

Various Rumors and Opinions

WASHINGTON, May 30. The senate having decided it has jurisdiction in the Belknap impeachment matter the opinion is expressed that the trial will be postponed until November next when the Senate will reassemble for that special purpose. Belknap has a large number of witnesses to be examined and his counsel will in defence of their client contest every step of the managers on the part of the House of Representatives there is a strong probability that the trial will continue six weeks or two months. Mr Lord chairman of the Board of Managers, expresses the opinion that it will occupy at least six weeks.

It is believed that so soon as the trial is over would prolong the session of Congress until the latter part of August or the first of September. In addition to the time necessary to dispose of the business of passing annual appropriation bills. Quite a number of Senators are in favor of postponing the trial until December when the impeachment question is submitted to the Senate they will bring their views as to the advisability of such postponement are expressed by many Democratic Senators as to whether the law of the land is in their favor. Two-thirds of the Senate are in favor of jurisdiction, but seem anxious to have a decisive decision proceeding with the trial. Very eminent legal authorities who have no connection whatever with the proceedings assert that the impeachment orders who voted against taking jurisdiction will not be precluded by the Senate's action from voting "not guilty" on the jurisdictional ground when the final issue is presented

The Fate of the Egyptian Army.

LONDON, May 30. The Daily News, Alexandria, Egypt, special says the fate of the Egyptian army in Abyssinia is exciting much comment. The war has doubtless been finished. About 8,000 soldiers have arrived at Suez. These with others now on the way there awaiting embarkment at Massowah (in all about 15,000) are said to be all that may be expected. This leaves about 15,000 unaccounted for. Several thousand were doubtless killed in battle and the remainder are unable to leave because of wounds and the commencement of the rainy season. The battle of November last caused a complete annihilation of one regiment, numbering 600, only 8 of whom returned to Egypt.

MEMORIAL DAY

Its Observance in this City and Brewer

The Procession—Address of Gen Davis Tillson

Attendance

Memorial Day was observed in this city by a general suspension of business. The morning was ushered in by the firing of a salute at sunrise. Memorial Day dawned in the town, numbers of Post 6 were detailed to decorate the graves of their fallen comrades. At Mr Hill's residence on Mr Hill's grounds stands a beautiful monument of white marble, which was decorated with a wreath of flowers. The following order

[illegible]

The column moved promptly at 1 o'clock under the following order

[illegible]

The column moved through the streets to the music of the Bangor Band and the Brewer Cornet Band, the sidewalks being lined with spectators. The procession halted at the Cemetery where the exercises were commenced by the singing of the hymn "Rock of Ages" by the choir, after which the Chaplain of the Post, Rev. J. A. Howard, offered a prayer. The Cornet Band then played a dirge, after which the Quartette sang "Rest, Spirit, Rest." The roll of honor was then read by Adjutant Clark, following which Commander Hamlin introduced Gen. Davis Tillson, who spoke as follows

Mr Chairman, Comrades and Fellow Citizens

I thank you for the opportunity of joining with you in the sad, but grateful duty of honoring the names, the memories, and the last resting places of our fallen comrades.

You have doubtless thought of the fact that the scene we are witnessing is being repeated throughout our broad country, that in our own beloved New England, in the broad valleys of the West, beyond the Great Mountains, even to the shores of the far-off Pacific, in every village and hamlet, in every town and city, our living comrades with their neighbors and friends, are gathering beneath the folds of the old flag, and at the beat of muffled drums, with slow and measured tread, are marching forth, bearing wreaths and garlands of the first sweet flowers of opening Spring, to lay with reverent and loving hands upon the graves of dead comrades.

What could be more impressive and more thrilling than this magnificent spectacle of a people, turning aside from the ordinary business, labor and cares of life, and coming in their full power and strength, with solemn steps with tearful eyes and grateful hearts, bearing offerings of flowers, to bow before these humble mounds in honor of the memories of the brave men who died that the nation might live.

In all the past no people ever gave such a fearful price for liberty as that we paid, and no people on the broad earth have better and more sacred shrines than those around which the nation bows with thankful homage to-day.

As we assemble with thinned and shattered ranks, once filled with our brave comrades how naturally our thoughts go back to the early scenes of the war. What a cloud of memories come clustering about us out of the past. We remember how reluctant and unwilling our people were to believe that our southern brothers herein of a glorious common history whose ancestors had fought side by side in many a battle field for rights which would resort to the dreadful alternative of civil war. We remember with what a thrill of horror we heard of the news of the firing upon Fort Sumter, followed by the instantaneous and powerful response of a million of freemen, which the world ever looked upon. You remember what a magnificent and overpowering outburst of patriotic enthusiasm followed. Every where the hosts of the flag were raised in the skies the clouds were broken and everywhere the people were rising and making their for the Union. You remember how these hosts in a short time were pushed from the borders and pursuers of power to overwhelm and scattered in the dust. We have seen the hosts of the rebellion rally and come on again and again, until the contest became a fearful one, and the hearts of the people were sometimes almost ready to fail them. We remember how the hosts in blue

IN MEMORIAM.

BY M.

To Him, God takes His own,
And gives full measure of sweetness
For every bitter cup,
And all earth's incompleteness

Takes them, and shuts from us
The light of their dear faces,
And leaves us a broken circle,
The empty, unclosed places

We pray "Thy will be done,"
Yet still we walk in sadness,
Longing while here to look
Upon our loved earth's dwellings

Lead, Father, up to them,
Remember our blindness;
Lead us in Thy own way,
We trust Thy loving kindness.

Our Father, love and it cast,
We know nothing can sever
The love that holds us Thine,
Here here and there, forever.

A PERILOUS COMPACT

"You say, Captain Jackson, that you have received written instructions from your owners by the last mail?"

"Yes sir, very particular and specific orders regarding the cargo wanted for the good ship Exporter."

"I understand you aright, the best quality of silks and the finest grade of teas only are wanted."

"Exactly Mr. Failing. But why do you ask? Are you unable to load the ship with the required quality and grade of goods?"

"Well, so I'm good time, Jackson. But I say, have you any objection to my glancing over your written instructions?"

"Certainly not, and if you are to furnish the cargo, I think it is advisable for you to thoroughly understand what is wanted and what I am allowed to receive."

The keen grey eyes of Mr Failing were fastened intently upon the weather-beaten countenance of the seaman for a moment, and then in a cool, hesitating tone, he added:

"If you will give me a boat, Jackson, I will send my clerk boy ashore for a case of dry Monopole. The wines is warranted fine champagne will not be disagreeable, eh?"

"By no means, but it is a luxury we poor sailors seldom have the opportunity of tasting," replied the Captain, with a sigh, as he thought of his far-off wife and two little babes.

The officer's wine was soon sparkling in the slender glasses, and the merchant pledged the sailor and his noble ship in a brimming bumper.

The Exporter was a fine clipper engaged in the China trade, owned by an opulent firm who coined their dollars by millions. The ship was commanded by Captain Jackson, an experienced shipmaster, but who had been compelled to accept the grinding terms of the parsimonious owners of the Exporter.

Captain Jackson had been unfortunate, at the time he applied to the firm for employment he was in debt, with a wife and family looking to him for support. He was not in a condition to dictate terms, but ventured to remonstrate feebly at the inadequate salary offered for the amount of property and responsibility he was expected to control and look after.

"We can get plenty of shipmasters for $50 per month," was the cold, harsh reply. "We do not ask you to accept it. You come to us, or you depart, another shall take your place."

And with a heavy heart, the poor fellow signed the articles, while the pale, suffering face of his wife rose up before him.

The Exporter was lying off Shanghai waiting for the valuable and special cargo which had been ordered by mail.

The merchant, Mr. Failing, was on board and as has already been narrated, was taking his comfort in the wide, spacious cabin of the vessel.

Glass after glass of champagne had been quaffed, the fragrant perfume of choice cigars filled the cabin, and poor Jackson, as the generous vintage mounted in his brain, for a time forgot his troubles.

The letter lay on the table before Failing, who, with his legs perched on a projecting cornice of the cabin, smoked in silence, while Jackson, well, or rather entirely unnatural to him, poured into the ears of Failing the entire story of his wrongs.

"You are not half paid, that is certain, Jackson, and there is but little chance to make a dollar out of the ship, hates. To be sure, you can do a little speculating with the crew, shipchandler etc., but after all what does it amount to? I came out here to make my fortune, Jackson, honestly if I can, and thus far have no reason to complain. But you are situated differently. You have no opportunities, your life is passing away, the greater portion is spent in battling the elements at $50 per month—for what that your owners may reap the fruits of thousands of dollars from your talents. Is that honest? Is it right or just? No. And how will it end? You are past the meridian of life and you stay you are a hero of the lighter. Now I shall speak plain, Jackson, too plain, perhaps, but all your glass man, I has been empty this half hour. As I said before, every day will bring you nearer your grave and the best years of your life spent away from your family whom you love. Even supposing that no accident occurs to excite the wrath of the firm that might cost you your position, in the course of time you will be warn out feeble and incapacitated by old age from rendering command. What will the merchant with his bags of gold, which you made for him, care for you then? Will he take into consideration the fact that you have braved dangers and unnamed every clime for the art, dest or merchandise so required? No, he will never give it a thought, and the old ship-master, the faithful but worn-out servant, will totter to the door of the sailor's snug harbor, and beg for charity and a roof over his gray head, unless indeed your wife and two girl babies can support you."

The merchant blew a long cloud of smoke from his lips as he ceased speaking and eyed Jackson with a very peculiar look as the latter indignantly wiped the perspiration from his brow, which had been invoked by the artful picture portrayed by the eloquence of the sharp, shrewd merchant.

"Good God! Mr. Failing, I never looked upon it in that light, but I dare say you are right. But what can I do? The $50 I get keeps my wife from starving."

"Exactly, and no more. Take another glass—that's right. Your good health. The Exporter is insured, isn't she?"

"Yes to her full value."

"And you hope to insure the cargo also?"

"Certainly, my owners are always very particular about that."

"Humph! How would you like to pocket $50,000, Jackson, and weather on your owners and the poor-house, eh?"

"What a question to ask a man in my position!" and Jackson's head began to spin about as he listened to the artfully-worded sophistry of the tempter.

"We can make a good thing of it, and now is your opportunity. Your owners grind you down, now let them take the consequences, although they will not lose much, but the anticipated profit. I will furnish you the silk and tea, but instead of the best, I will give the poorest. Don't jump, man; there's no harm done yet. The highest market price will be charged, and you shall have $25,000 to-night, or when you sign the regular articles of agreement as having received the stipulated quality and quantity. The other $25,000 will be paid when the Exporter goes to the bottom and you return to Shanghai from the wreck. Not a word, man, but come ashore. We'll talk it over at my office."

And, linking his arm through Jackson's he assisted the shipmaster to leave the cabin and descend the side.

The next day the first lighter-load of cargo for the Exporter arrived, and both bale and box was rattled rapidly into her capacious hold. In less than two weeks time the ship was ready for sea, and Jackson, who had spent the greater portion of his time on shore, repaired on board.

Not until too late did the entangled seaman awake from the delusive dream into which he had been beguiled by the skillful Failing. The ship was loaded, the first half of the $50,000 had been paid, and Jackson, by the advice of the merchant, did not bank the amount, but negotiated for the value in diamonds, which he wore around his body.

It was too late to retreat; he had gone too far; and although his conscience troubled him sadly, still he made up his mind to carry out the fraud that had been commenced.

The Exporter sailed down the mighty Yangtse with a fair wind, which freshened as the good ship passed Woo Sung. Everybody on board was in high spirits at the idea of being homeward bound, with the exception of poor Jackson, who paced the deck in moody silence. He had solemnly sworn never to take champagne again, and had firmly made up his mind not to revisit Shanghai, for he had learned to fear the influence which Failing exercised over him.

He kept to himself, avoided the society of his first mate, and spent most of his time in the seclusion of his cabin, brooding over the terrible secret which he carried in his bosom.

The character of the cargo preyed continually on his mind, and waking or sleeping, he was constantly haunted by a nightmare. He grew nervous and impatient, so much so that both officers and crew wondered at the sudden change that had come over the "old man."
